Founding distiller, former slave Nathan “Nearest” Green utilized a process where whiskey is filtered through sugar maple charcoal prior to its aging in charred oak barrels. During these times former slaves like Nearest were not celebrated, but his whiskey making skills were that of the most sought after and he was legend!

It is storied that he might have also taught Jack Daniel how to make whiskey. So, to say there is some history behind this whiskey is an understatement.

$15 for the 1856

$13 for the 1884 small batch.

Whiskey Society members receive $4 off a dram!

Please click the website link above and flip through the history pages and scroll down and around to learn more, it is fascinating!
